

CSS Basics - Test

IDs and classes

1. Which expression(s) is/are correct?
 - IDs can be used multiple times within a web page.
 - Classes can be used multiple times within a web page.
 - IDs should only be used once within a web page.
 - Classes should only be used once within a web page.

Margin and padding

1. Which expression(s) is/are correct?
 - The `margin` property defines the inner distance from another element. The background color is painted in the the margin area.
 - The `margin` property defines the inner distance from another element. The background color is not painted in the the margin area.
 - The `margin` property defines the outer distance from another element. The background color is painted in the the margin area.
 - The `margin` property defines the outer distance from another element. The background color is not painted in the the margin area.
2. Which expression(s) is/are correct?
 - The `padding` property defines the inner distance from another element. The background color is painted in the the padding area.
 - The `padding` property defines the inner distance from another element. The background color is not painted in the the padding area.
 - The `padding` property defines the outer distance from another element. The background color is painted in the the padding area.
 - The `padding` property defines the outer distance from another element. The background color is not painted in the the padding area.

Height and width

1. Which expression(s) is/are correct?
 - The width and height are limited by an `display: none;`.
 - The width and height are limited by an `overflow: hidden;`.

- The width and height are limited by an position: `absolute;`.
- The width and height are limited by an float: `left;`.

Floating

1. Floating with `float: left;` can be deactivated by

- `clear: both;`.
- `clear: left;`.
- `overflow: hidden;`.
- `float: none;`.